

Like getting back home
'or Thanksgiving—
they satisfy!

Thanksgiving with the old folks at home—it does satisfy! For your smoking, Chesterfields do the same thing—they satisfy!

But Chesterfields are MILD, too—that's the wonder of it.

Don't expect this new cigarette enjoyment (satisfy, yet mild) from any cigarette but Chesterfields, because no cigarette maker can copy the Chesterfield blend—an entirely new combination of tobaccos and the biggest discovery in cigarette making in 20 years.

He "lined."

A patriotic grocer in a small Scottish village decided that either he or his assistant must go to the war. And as he himself was single, his mother and sisters being well provided for from their shares in the shop, he thought he was the one to go.

Meekly the assistant agreed to go, and presently found him self in a hospital of the business.

But a few months later the master was discharged to meet his late assistant, attired in a khaki, "somewhere in France."

"He mon!" he said angrily, "did I no tell ye to stay at home in charge of our shop?"

"So I thought at the time, master," replied Mackay, "but I sune fun' out it wasna only the shop I was in charge o', but a' yer wum-folk. 'Man,' ses I to myself, 'gin ye've got to fecht, gang an' fecht some one ye can hit!' So I jined." —St. Louis Star.

He Obeyed Orders.

The class was seated ready for recitation, when a young student rushed in and dropped a great pile of books on the floor. The nervous professor jumped up and said, angrily:

"Young man, go down to the president's office and drop those books just like that."

The youth departed, returning in a few moments and calmly taking his seat in the class.

"Did you do as I told you?" demanded the irate professor.

"Yes, sir."

"What did the president say?"

"Nothing," coolly returned the student. "He was'n't there."—Ex.

The Next World

I never worry over what I'll do or how I'll feel in the next world. It is written that the Lord tempts the wind to the shorn lamb. If he is so mindful of a sheep he will surely know how to take care of an old woman who has lost her body and her mortal bearings. However we never have a death in the town that the bereaved do not begin to question the providence of God to find out why he took this particular son or husband or father. And they never do find out. I do not admire Job. He must have been the Thomas Carlyle of the Old Testament, with remarkable literary gifts but so cantankerous and mean that I have often wondered what his boasted integrity could have been. But he did not know how to behave with dignity when his sons and daughters perished. "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away blessed be the name of the Lord." That is as good a way as any of disposing of the whole matter, though it places more responsibility upon him than the facts warrant sometimes when the deceased has outraged every law of health, as the living usually do before they die.—From "A Circuit Rider's Widow," in the Saturday Evening Post.

Blow Hay Into Box Cars

Blowing hay into box cars instead of baling it is one of the newest time saving schemes employed on the Umatilla Project, near Harmons, Oregon. In this region alfalfa grows so abundantly that baling was found to be a slow and cumbersome process. To eliminate this work, ordinary blowers such as used in planing mills to handle shavings were fitted up with gasoline engines or electric motors and put to work blowing the chopped hay into the box cars.

When these cars reached their destination, this blowing process was reversed, with the result that the hay was soon blown bodily from the cars and shot into the big warehouse or stockyards bins. There is a decided saving of time and labor with this new method and besides, it is possible to load more hay in a car than with baled hay.—Ex.

Proving It

The reading class was in session and the word "furlough" occurred. Miss Jones, the teacher, asked if any little girl or boy knew the meaning of the word.

One small hand was raised. "Furlough means a mule," said the child.

"Oh, no it doesn't," said the teacher.

"Yes, ma'am," insisted the little girl. "I have the book at home that says so."

Miss Jones told the child to bring the book to school. The next morning the child came armed with a book and triumphantly showed a picture of an American soldier riding a mule, under which was the caption:

"Going home on his furlough."

The Building of Success

Thrift is the plan by which success is built. It underlies the efforts of those who permanently prosper. There must be determination to secure full value from every dollar and to lay aside a portion of the income as a surplus that will purchase the really worth while things.

Thrift means a bank account. A bank account leads to profitable investment; to independence; to prosperit" to success.
